

AILEENS

WELCOME TO AILEEN'S RESTAURANT

This new dining space was developed in a 4 week period in Jan 2022. The restaurant is a celebration of contemporary Irish Cuisine, with a dedicated all electric kitchen headed up by Chef Sebastian Schulze. Time is taken to source and grow produce that should make your dining experience unique in many ways. We have developed ways to prepare and cook this food so that we can deliver an unforgettable experience and with the location to match.

Aileen's Restaurant derives its name from the world famous wave found at the Cliffs of Moher, an iconic wave that was first surfed in 2005 by local legends John Mc Carthy, Dave Blount and Dan Skajarowski, and an extended crew from overseas.

The wave christened Aileens by those surfers, is a derivative of the place name Aillenasharragh – 'the Leap of the Foals' It has been told that when St. Patrick introduced Christianity to Ireland there was anger among the reigning pagan gods, the Tuatha Dé Danann. They magically turned themselves into horses and galloped to Kilcornan in the Burren where they hid out in the Kilcornan Caves ('the Cavern of the Wild Horses'). As time went by, there was no sign of the legendary Tuatha Dé Danann until one day 7 foals emerged from the caves. Terrified by the bright light of day, they galloped along the edge of the Cliffs of Moher, and in blind fear they galloped straight over the cliffs at the point now known as Aillenasharragh.

Our naming of the restaurant is a tribute to all lovers of the Sea, from the surfers and swimmers, to the fishermen and biologists, and everyone else who is as passionate about the Ocean as we are.

We hope you enjoy your meal, and enjoy the view.

Warm Regards,

John Burke
